

Who could the Messiah have been? Whosoever would! The introduction of the internet was a point in history unlike any other. What made it special is that all of the deceitful, and underhanded acts that the Israelites ie. the (wheat) were oblivious to was released by those responsible. Most importantly the one thing that made it special was the fact that the goal of the Law or Instructions of God, were now to finally be witnessed by the world. Many people discovered this material with all the devastating information, and lots of people did tell family and friends that they had been led from truth only to become strangers to those they once were close to. The difficulty was not in finding God if you new where to look, as all it took with me is I did what God had told everyone to do!

Acts 17:27 says: Indeed, that they Seek God, and might palpate and feel for Him, for He is not far from anyone of us.

In brief words let me tell you about my God experience.

I'm thinking it was just after my third baptism, none of which would seem to last. I wanted to love God so much that I looked up and asked, "If you don't mind God, would you let me love you just a little bit more than anyone who's ever existed? I went from that attitude to getting to the point of utter despair that I was wishing I could make it, so I had never been born. In a serious talk with God I said, I have been looking for you since I was a child and I've come to the conclusion that if you are real, you're just as big a liar as I am! Another thing I said "if you aren't everything that your word said you were you're nothing!

I now see what was happening came from within me. I didn't notice this at the time, but the scripture that suits best is 1 King 8:41 thru 43 concerning the stranger. I was staying in my partially completed Man-Cave that I built with my dad's help, a small movable cabin. This is when and where I hallowed my first Sabbath day, as best I could I prayed directly toward the east. Of the candles that I had lit that I had placed on a plastic cabinet, three were the small scone candles that you can get at Walmart. After I read some scripture, I laid my Bible down on the cabinet and went to pray, and without knowing it the ribbon page marker was laid up the side of one of the candles, and so perfectly arranged.

I didn't become aware of the ribbon until I returned to read more scripture, because the first time I did is when I went over on the other side of the cabinet to pray. That's where I laid down on the floor prostrate and was praying very intensely. Afterwards is when I came back to read more before going to pray more, and then I noticed the ribbon against the candle. The other two candles were halfway melted, while the ribbon-candle was as if it had been lit for no more than a minute!

I saw the positioning of the ribbon and how that candle was like new, as I picked up my Bible and said inside myself, okay, what's wrong with that candle? I then bring my eyes to the Bible, back to the candle two or three times and then think, "I'm too busy searching for God to wonder why a candle won't melt!" So, I proceed to read a bit of scripture, and then return to my spot for more prayer. When I get done praying this time the ribbon-candle was nothing, but a melted mass spread out on the cabinet along with the other two and completely burnt out. But one of the other two had a quarter inch piece of wick and still burning. That's when a rush went through me, I knew then I had found the true God.

God then started awakening the Kingdom of Heaven that was within me, as we are all told that is where it's found.

I had started studying the material on biblehub.com, scriptures were opened up like I had never known was possible. I would have wondrous revelations at night in my bed that would cause me to suddenly sit up with a feeling that I wanted to start running down the road yelling, "Hallelujah, I see things you just gotta see people!" That was good stuff!

Now the scary stuff! I could never get in step with God and began to see why. Everyone together could've seen for themselves frightening information if the right circumstances were to have been that would've allowed them to. Nevertheless, God had arranged my time to see the scary things.

The moment I saw only one of the many scary things within study, I say this; 'I don't even know if I want to know this!' This was not long after my candle-day, I had completely given up on God, and those words I spoke are only some I had spoken that bound me to an oath to God! I remember the candle! Then I think, No! God, I asked you to show me something, you did, and now I have to take whatever it is I must receive.

So then, let's look at the difference between me and what makes it different than for others that had discovered the truth. I have to use my friend and ex-pastor Jason for an example. Pastor Jason about a year before my candle-day came to church and as he was walking toward the pulpit after a small group chat, he said, "that Greek and Hebrew Concordance, aww forget that." The day I uttered the words, "I don't know if I want to know this!" Is when Jason's words around a year earlier came to mind. He had had a stroke from the time he said his words, to the time I had seen why he said them.

I went to Jason's house, and in our little I said Jason, what you had said about the Greek and Hebrew Concordances, you shouldn't have said that!" He said, "there's something wrong and they all know it!"

And this is the conclusion, all those who had seen the scary stuff was left with a choice. Their choosing not to be truthful with their neighbors, and now continuing to speak in their now willful ignorance to others led their followers away from the truth. I myself was left with no choice. I have and I am learning all that is needed to bring everyone out of the situation that the world is in. That which was necessary and inevitable to come. And if anyone of you reading this would've had seen the opportunity that I saw, given by God you'd have done the same thing that I'm doing no matter what you looked like to anyone. So, Messiah was always the whosoever would!

The Grand Finale of the Word of God is here, the ultimate story's conclusion for everyone, the bringing in of the Messianic Kingdom on earth. To the glory of our Heavenly Father who arranged everything! 1925
